CROSSFIELD LUMBER YARD
W. STUART & CO., PROPRIETORS

The 24th at Bowden

About fifty of our good citizens followed their baseball team to Bowden and took in the celebration held under the auspices of the band of that place on May 24th. The day was fine and warm and an ideal time was had.

The program of sports presented was lengthy and interesting comprising the following events: pony races, foot races, trap shooting, a foot ball match between Olds and Innisfail, a base ball match between Crossfield and Bowden and a ladies' baseball game between two ladies' teams of Bowden.

The trap shooting was pulled off in the morning and immediately after dinner Crossfield and Bowden lined up.

The match resulted in a win for Bowden the score being 11 to 3. Want of team work among our men was the cause although individually they graded higher than the Bowden team. Wagener was in the box for the locals pitching the first six innings after which he was relieved by Edwards who pitched the 7th and last. Both pitchers twirled a good game very few safe hits being made off them.

Bowden secured their lead in the third, when errors in the out and infield let in five runs. All the runs scored by our boys were made in the fourth when with two men on bases a home run was batted.

The boys here have good material for a fast nine and before the season is over should have a long winning record. It is expected that the return game with Bowden will be played here on June 22nd.

The teams lined up as follows:

Crossfield	Bowden
McBean	Catcher Samis
Wagener	Pitcher Cornish
Ureghart	1st Base Buchanan
Thomas	2nd Base McBroom
Hall	S. Stop Lawrence
Brown	3rd Base Samis
McKim	R. Field Arnold
Bruno	C. " Ridgway
Edwards	L. " MacDonald

McNeil of Adrie won most of the athletic events and the ladies' base ball game was the comedy event of the program.

Irricana Sports

Several Crossfield people took in the sports at Irricana on the 24th. They report a most enjoyable day and say they were very hospitably treated by the Irricana people. Among those who went were R. Boyle, W. Tims, Mr. Lobley, Dave Rambo and Craig Wilson. The Crossfield contingent took an additional interest in the sports from the fact that Dave Rambo had entered his sorrel gelding "Country Boy" known as "Sandy" in the free for all running race. "Sandy" with Craig Wilson up won the race but the owner of the vanquished competitor did not seem satisfied with the result and proposed a matched race. The proposal met with instant acceptance and a purse of $25.00 a side was made up which was landed by Sandy quite easily. Considerable cash is reported to have changed hands on the race.

Political Rumors

A recent dispatch from Edmonton contains the following facts and rumors in regard to the present legislative crisis.

The approaching meeting of the provincial legislature is causing a great amount of excitement. The royal commission has not yet concluded its session and will not have finished its labors when the house meets. It is probable that it will take at least a month for the com-

And that revives all the rumors of which there has been so plentiful a crop the last few months. Of these rumors some are true and some have only an element of truth
in them.

It is certain that the government is preparing to meet the house. It is almost equally certain that the government is preparing a bill to cancel the contract with the Clarks.
Whatever the excuse that will be offered the contract is to be cancelled.

That much is certain. From there we must descend to the question of rumor.

It is rumored in this city that the lieutenant governor will call upon Chief Justice Sifton to form a government and he will make this call some time before the house meets.

A few weeks ago it was understood that the chief justice would not accept the office unless the call was unanimous form all the members of the liberal party. But the call has not been unanimous, but now it is generally believed that he will undertake to form a government just the same. If he does assume the office it is expected that he will have opposition from certain members of the insurgents and possibly from certain members of the government, and of the Conservatives, but he will control a majority nevertheless.

If he assumes office he will not include Hon. W. H. Cushing in his cabinet. He has been very discreet and has made no statement that is at all of a public nature, but men who think they know say that the Sifton cabinet would be composed of three members, including himself, Judge Mitchell and Senator
Peter Talbot.

The insurgents are still hopeful of Mr. Cushing being eventually called to form a government and hope to do this by defeating the government in the house. If there is a meeting of house under the present leadership

it is possible that the insurgents may win out. In that case the question is put right up to the lieutenant governor, and his task if he has decided to call upon the chief justice might be somewhat harder.

However the public may well be prepared for anything within the next few days. The commission is going on but it has pretty much lost interest and the political situation has quite overshadowed it.

The one thing that is fairly certain is that the government if it gets a chance to meet the house, will present a bill cancelling the A. & G.
W. contract.

It is almost equally certain that either now or when the commission
presents its report that Chief Justice Sifton will be called upon to form a cabinet, and that he will accept.

It is quite as certain that Hon. W.
H. Cushing will not be a member of that cabinet. That is the position of affairs at the present time.
It is a question of when.

Provincial Exhibition

The Provincial Exhibition to be held at Calgary, June 30th to July 7th is going to excel any previous effort made in Canada, west of Winnipeg. Some of the prominent features will be:

A mechanical milking machine
demonstration with instructive lectures.

An acre yield competition in which all grain grown on an acre must be shown, and for which practically $1000 is offered in prizes.
This feature promises to be a great success.

An exhibition showing the different grades of commercial steers.

An exhibition illustrating the process of grading up by the use of a pure bred stallion.

An actual forestry demonstration
by the Dominion Tree Planting Division on a large plot of ground.

An art and china loan exhibit composed of the best pictures and china from homes of residents in western Canada. Many families have articles of great value brought from their former homes, and you will be surprised at the magnificence of the display. If you have any such article of merit that you are willing to exhibit the manager of the exhibition will appreciate it if you will let him know.

All freight rates are refunded on exhibits originating in Alberta.

The best music and attractions that can be secured including the famous Navasars Ladies' Band.

Entries for exhibition will close
June 18th at Calgary.

Make up a party of your friends
and enjoy a grand holiday.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

FASCINATINGLY dainty and smart are the summer gowns now exhibited, and material and coloring alike seem symbolic of the season. It may be the contrast of the diaphanous fabrics with the furs and heavy dark cloths of the winter that makes all summer materials so attractive and so much more in keeping with the light sunshine and warm days.

Never were there so many exquisitely fine light weight materials as are to be seen this spring. Voile de soie, marquisette, lace and net of all kinds and descriptions line the counters of the dry goods shops and gowns made of these materials are in the lead at all the openings at the fashion-soft fabrics can be draped to perfection in carrying out the design. For the moment the fashion is universally popular, but its very popularity should be considered carefully in choosing the summer outfit, as there is always danger when any style is so unanimously chosen of its losing its smart distinction. However, it is a style that in spite of its apparent simplicity is most difficult to carry out, and the prices asked for simplicity in dress are generally prohibitory for the great majority of women.

The open neck has again to be discussed. Undoubtedly the fashion of the round or open neck is to be reckoned with and the finish of the embroidered linen or pleated lace collar is considered smart at the moment; but the line between a smart, effective, low cut neck and a vulgar one is so very narrow that conservative people continue to vote against the style and solve the difficulty by the transparent net or lace gimples with high stitch collar. This is a universally becoming style and does not interfere with the neck of the gown being cut quite low.

All kinds of pongee and tussor gowns are extremely smart this season and are made in all colors and all shades of colors, it may truthfully be said. For a coat and skirt costume there is nothing more practical, and the simplest of waists of net, lace, chiffon or lingerie are worn with them. Then there are the entire gowns with coat to match, high waisted, and on the Empire order, but for practical purposes the skirt and separate waist with coat to match are far more satisfactory. All shades of red, blue, green and purple, especially the darkest shades of purple, are most popular, and every conceivable quality is to be seen. But it also is to be noted that it is not fashionable to have long skirts, the short ones being chosen in preference every time.

Coats just long enough to reach below the hips are the smartest, and as a rule are painfully shapeless, with straight, full backs, the fulness belted in across the back. The fronts are almost straight and loose. Such is the cleverness of the fashionable designer of the day, however, that these coats, or rather jackets, full and loose as they are, do not make the figure seem large, but on the contrary, slight. Skirts are decidedly novel. All with straight lines, narrow and, it must, alas! be admitted, ungraceful, these skirts have only the element of being quite different from any former styles to recommend them, but they are new. The pleated skirt is far prettier, and is also fashionable, but lacks the smart if somewhat conspicuous appearance of the others. Pleated skirts, the new styles, differ materially from those of two years ago; often there is the overskirt effect of a double set of pleats, one falling just a little over the top of the other, as though there were two flounces. This, with the waist in the same size pleats and a patent leather belt, is a favorite for a frou-lard, but is also quite good in tussor or pongee. It gives quite the effect of a blouse coat and is, in truth, more comfortable for summer, when every additional yard of material is to be dreaded.

There is really not enough attention paid to the practical in clothes intended for summer wear. A model that in itself is charming, effective and graceful will require to be lined or made in such a manner that it will be quite too warm for comfort except in cold weather and yet will be most carefully ordered. Fortunately, of late dressmakers and designers have studied the subject of comfort much more than in years gone by and the heavy linings once considered essential are banished, and if there is a separate boned and fitted lining, fitted to perfection, the unlined, or at most chiffon lined, waist is made up for the heated term.

ALMOST HONEST

A PROMOTER, who had been chased out of Goldfield, Nevada, for selling bogus mining stocks, sat moodily in a San Francisco hotel.

Blue and White Voile de Soie Gown Over White Lining

able dressmakers. There are plain and figured effects and a marvellously wide range of colors, while ingenuity and knowledge of how to combine the colors is taxed to the utmost to evolve the most extraordinary effects. "Scarcely practical" is the first criticism against the sheer materials—too fine and too soft—but like the gowns of old time fiction, so fine that they could be passed through a wedding ring, these gowns often wear far better than those of heavier and apparently stronger fibre. In truth, the amount of wear that can be given without apparently any effect is most surprising, oftentimes far more than to a foulard or satin.

Cheeks, fine shepherd plaid cheeks in black and white, gray and white, any and every color and white are deliciously cool in appearance and are most fashionable. Sometimes black satin is used to trim them, but not too much of any such contrast. Laces and embroideries are fashionable trimmings for the figured voile de soie, but are not used too lavishly and are always, as it were, subordinated to the rest of the gown. A band around the skirt is of plain color, lace or embroidery, and a touch of the same is in the broad belt and on the sleeves, but every effort is made to keep the light, cool appearance. This does not apply in every case, for there are two or two models on which a lot of black is to be noticed—a broad girle or band around the skirt, and two long sash ends of black velvet or satin. But this may be taken as an example that the exception proves the rule, for the majority of the smart gowns are all in one tone of coloring.

The question of the lining is all important this season. The number of petticoats has been reduced to a minimum, and in truth, as few undergarments as possible are worn, but all thin transparent gowns boast not one but two and sometimes three linings. The foundation is of silk or satin, which is veiled in a contrasting color of finest voile de soie, and over this is sometimes another veiling and then comes the material of the gown itself. Indescribably charming are the effects gained by the use of the different veilings used in this manner. A foundation green lining over which is a purple and then a blue gives a mysterious effect of depth and color impossible to find in any one material. For the shepherd plaid voile de soie the lining is either white or the color of the darker checks.

In the soft, thin fabrics quite different models are fashionable from those to be made in materials like tussor and pongee; the thinner foulards are clasped with the voile, but the heavier can be made in almost any style. The return of the kimono sleeve is one of the marked styles of the season, but it is not the same kimono as of old. In some respects it is even more uncomfortable, and it is quite impossible in many of the newest models to raise the arms to the head, but then exercise has evidently not been in the minds of the artists who have designed the clothes of this year, for many of the most fashionable skirts are quite too narrow to permit of taking a long step, while the broad stiff band of material that binds the skirt just above the ankle was surely never designed for any woman who was fond of walking. Be coming, intensely so, are the waists with sleeves and folds across the shoulders all in one piece, and the transparent and

B RITISH investigators estimate that the rails of a single railway system in England lose eighteen tons in weight every day, and that the larger part of this loss is due to the effects of rust. The problem of rust is of great economical importance, not only because of such losses as that just mentioned, but also because of the great expense involved in repainting iron and steel structures in order to preserve them. Thus $10,000 a year is spent in painting the great Scotch bridge over the Forth.

Recent experiments indicate that pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid, and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen, it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.

In Darkest Africa

THE estimated area of southern Nigeria is 77,000 square miles, that of northern Nigeria, the hinterland of southern Nigeria, is estimated at 255,000, and the native population of the two combined at from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000, yet an effort at scientific agriculture or mining is confronted by the labor question. The wants of the natives are few, and on account of primitive custom of acquiring only personal property, and that in the form of cattle, wives, and children, depending on the latter in old age for support, they give little thought to having aside money for use in time of illness and old age. In the interior traders say that the natives often refuse money in exchange for their products, gathering where they have not sown, but will receive tobacco, spirits, cotton goods, etc., when they desire them for immediate use. In some parts of the hinterland tobacco is an absolute necessity in trading.

Here is where you must not go strong. Do not let your love for any and all dogs get the best of your judgment. You are not buying a friend and companion, but a hunting dog. The time to commence liking a hunting dog is when he has made good in the field. To return to the transaction, the sooner or later get a letter, very apologetic, explaining that Mr. Dog Sharp was out of town attending to some one or other of his big business interests at the time your dog was shipped, and his kennelmen got the dogs mixed and sent the dog you should have got away up sick and died on route, and was consequently a total loss; that the kennel is conducted more by gift than by business employment, he being a boyhood chum; that you have in your possession a really valuable dog, give him a good looker, it is true; that because of the delay there is no longer a market for this dog up in Manitoba, and, finally, it is practically giving you the dog to let him go for fifty dollars. And, like the chump you are, you send along your check, fondly believing that when you eventually do get around to it and can take your dog out somewhere where there is a chance of finding game he will be a winner.

That is only one simple little trick; there are dozens of others. But you can protect yourself from sharpers by putting your money in the care of your magazine, as already described. Where your real trouble will come in is in getting a satisfactory dog from a reputable dealer. Not that you will not be treated right, according to the code. You must not expect a dog man or a horse dealer to tell you everything, you know. A breeder will sell his stock or he can make no money. You cannot blame him for the things he does not tell you; the dog is sent for your examination and is not misrepresented. It is up to you.

You will probably "send away" for practically every dog you ever buy. And so you might as well begin now to sell the breeders pick out a dog that will suit you. You must remember that your own disposition will have a great deal to do with whether or not the dog you buy will turn out satisfactory. In my own case, after owning a number of pointers and setters, not to mention Airedales, hounds, etc., I confess I am still unable to tell a breeder just the sort of puppy to select for me. I can do far better if I can pick out the dog from the litter with my own hands. But it may not be easy for you. No two men are just alike, you see.

I have to have a dog that has a good deal of courage, or he is worthless to me. Regardless of ambition and bird sense, speed stamina and all the other qualifications that go into the make-up of a high-class hunting dog. I personally must make sure of courage—and total absence of nervousness. And it is simply because I am naturally high strung, and am sharp spoken, stern and intolerant when handling a dog. I love a dog—any sort of dog—but it is my nature to enforce what my good mother calls "bronnastic discipline." I have seen men who could train horses and dogs to do their bidding without the use of a whip. I cannot; I use a whip and a spike collar in training a dog, and although I fully appreciate the need for a dog trainer to have good control over himself, it must still be a steady, gritty pup that can stay through my training and retain his nerve. Consequently, I have to be very careful in getting a new puppy to train. I cite this merely as an example.

If, on the contrary, you are gentle mannered and easy going when handling a dog, I advise you not to get a dog with too much independence. He will almost surely prove unsatisfactory. He will "get into you" and will take advantage of you. Such a dog will break short persistently, disobey you in every way and make himself intolerable. Above all things, make it clear to the breeder that you must have a puppy with plenty of ambition. And when the youngster comes, try him out. This may seem too difficult, as you may be situated so you can take the dog out where he can hunt without danger of having him run away from you. You must have a hunter, and you must go to some pains to try the puppy's qualifications. Take him out on a long check line, if need be; whatever you do, give him opportunity to range about and try to find something. If he has the right stuff in him he will keep you busy holding onto the rope. But you must give him a little time to get his head on the first few minutes' trial. He may be a little timid and feel "off his beat." Take him where there can be nothing to worry or scare him and where he can see no one but yourself. Be sure he is not uncomfortable from rain or snow or muddy ground, and that he is not cold or hungry. Have him in good humor, give him plenty of rope, and then if he does not hunt and hunt hard, he is not the dog for you. This applies to hunting dogs of all kinds. Other things you must make sure of are the young dog's sense of smell, his hearing and his attitude toward the sound of a gun. One of the several ailments which puppies are apt to have may have left the young dog hard of hearing or with impaired sense of smell. Careful observation will tell you if the dog is sound in these respects. But you will have to actually try him out to see if he is gun-shy. Many high-bred dogs are; due, I am told, to excessive nervousness, which is traceable to inbreeding.

Do not be too headlong in buying that dog. I know the average man likes to make a quick purchase and have it over, disliking to seem too careful of his money. It is not the money so much, my brother, that you are safeguarding; it is your recreation. Do not forget that. You no doubt can afford to lose the price of a dog or two. But you cannot afford to lose the pleasure that the possession of a thoroughly satisfactory dog will bring you. We often hear it said that no man ever can own more than one really satisfactory dog; but this is far from true. It is only necessary to find out just the kind of dog that suits you, and then take only that dog which measures up to your requirements. In other words, you must make up your mind to make a bigger job out of getting a dog than you think it ought to be. You can well afford to wait for even a year or two, rather than get dog which you can do nothing with and which, nevertheless, you will persist in trying to get with, simply because it has a good pedigree and cost you as much as a month's rent. Another thing: when you eventually wake up to the fact that your dog is not good enough for you, what are you going to do with him? How will you get your money back? I'm sorry, but I can't tell you. I have always had to give them away.

But the good dog, the one you are going to remember as long as you live, the pal of all pals, the friend of all friends—you'll always be proud of the fact that you paid a good price for him! And as for selling him—excuse me! Let's not talk about it.

A SHIP THAT CLIMBED AN ICE-BERG

THERE have been many instances of ships colliding with icebergs, and dozens of ships have been lost or disabled through such mishaps; but there is only one case on record where a ship climbed an iceberg, and succeeded so well that her crew and passengers were frightened nearly out of their wits. The ship which performed this remarkable feat is still in service, plying between New York and Newfoundland.

In June, 1893, the Fortia, commanded by Captain Ash, was carrying a big party of tourists off the Newfoundland coast, when the lookout sighted a gleaming iceberg ahead. The announcement was enough to call every one on deck, and tourists, scientists, and crew scrambled for a view of the towering mass of dazzling ice. It was a calm, clear day and there was apparently no danger. The iceberg was eight hundred feet long and two hundred feet high, and in the sunlight it was a sight calculated to stir the imagination of the most lethargic. Everybody wanted to get near to the great mountain of ice, and the captain, willing to accommodate his passengers, moved the steamer nearer. Finally, when within gunshot of the berg, the steamer was stopped, so that all could watch and admire the floating danger of the northern seas.

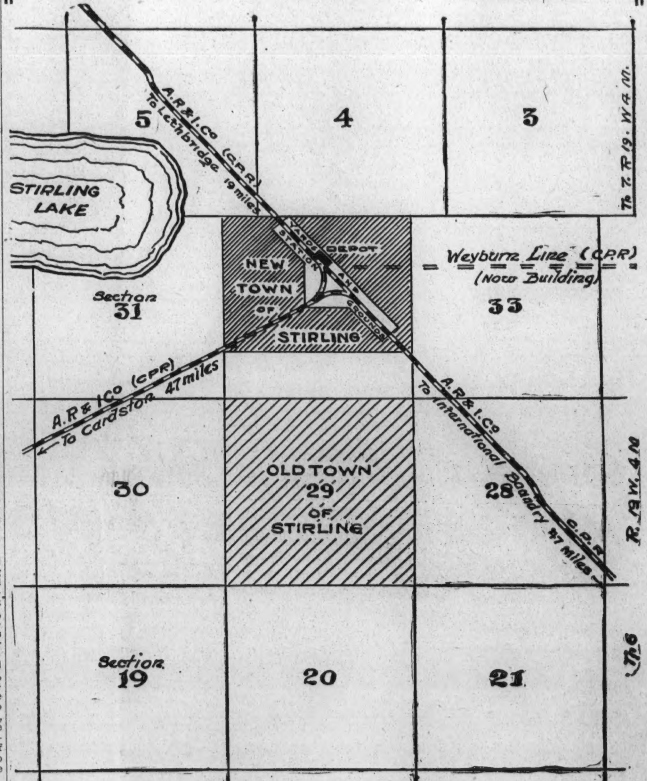

No one anticipated any attempt on the part of the steamer to climb the berg, and it was only when a sudden and crunching sound startled them that thoughts of danger entered the minds of crew or passengers. The ship was followed by a terrific tumble, and the iceberg quivered and split in two. Almost instantly the steamer was raised upward and held suspended in the air. The order was quickly given to back up, but the great propellers churned empty air. The Fortia was on the iceberg. As is quite common among icebergs, there was a big ledge of ice surrounding the base, but so submerged that its presence was not detected. In approaching, the steamer's keel had grated on this ledge; but as this was retorted by the salt water, it split under the impact and caused the whole berg to crack in two immense pieces. The jar upset the balance of the mountain of ice and it started to topple over, while the extended ledge, as it rose, caught the steamer and raised it clean out of the water. It was probably the weight of the steamer which kept the berg from turning over completely.

Everyone was paralyzed by the terror of this unexpected event, and it was as though the sea had suddenly vomited up a thousand tons of ice and was lifting the steamer up in mid-air as though it had been a plighting. Then another tremendous shock and upheaval followed in the wake of the splitting of the berg. The noise of the cracking ice had hardly subsided when an enormous wave, created by the splitting and toppling of the berg, swept across the ledge, and, picking the steamer up as easily as if it were a piece of cork, slid it back into the sea. By the time the passengers could get their heads above water, the berg had climbed the ice-berg and was back again on the bottom of the sea unharmed except for some deep scars.

STIRLING

IN SUNNY SOUTHERN ALBERTA

SCALE, TWO INCHES EQUALS ONE MILE

The above map gives at a glance the ideal location of the new town of Stirling. There are three railways radiating from it, one to the north, one to the west, and one to the south.

The map also shows the space at the junction reserved by the railway for yards, track, station grounds, etc. The elevator, chopping mill, loading platform and stockyards are within this area, being located just north of the depot. There is more space reserved for railway purposes in New Stirling than in any town west of Moose Jaw.

The new town of Stirling is growing by leaps and bounds. Last June it was open prairie; today a thriving town, with local and long distance telephone. A newspaper, "The New Stirling Star," has just been established, and a telegram from the editor states that the first issue will be out this week.

Mr. Jess Fike shipped his well drilling machinetoe Calgary last night where he will have it repaired preparatory to moving it southeast of Lethbridge, to fill a contract he has drilling well for a new townsite company.

The United Farmers of Alberta will hold a meeting in the Odd Fellows Hall, Crossfield, on Monday, June 6th at 2 o'clock. D. W. Warner will address the meeting on pork packing plant and other interesting subjects.

Joe Barry, east of town, was kicked by a horse on Monday. He had three ribs broken and was otherwise internally injured. At present he is progressing favorably in the hospital at Calgary where it was thought advisable to remove him.

The Board of Trade held a meeting on Thursday evening, to consider the matter of the resignation of J. S. Martin as secretary. On Mr. Martin insisting that circumstances made it impossible for him to longer continue as secretary his resignation was accepted and S. Willis was appointed to fill the vacancy. The Board also took up the matter of a physician and decided to take immediate steps to secure one for this place.

Rumworth Notes

The question of herd law is being agitated in this township. No doubt it will be opposed by those who are running small droves of cattle. If the labor and expense of fencing were dispensed with there would be more land broken up. It is to be hoped that the present legal fence will soon be a thing of the past.

Mr. N. J. Heston is building a house and barn on section 13.

M. S. Long and Frank Seville are appointed roadmasters.

K. Maurmann has sold his home-stand for 19.00 per acre.

Premier Resigns

On Thursday Premier Rutherford resigned and the legislature prorogued. Immediately after the resignation of Rutherford, the Hon. A. L. Sifton was sworn in as premier of Alberta. No definite announcement has yet been made as to the personnel of the new cabinet, though conjectures are plentiful enough. Among those mentioned as probabilities are the following: Judge Mitchell of Calgary, Duncan Marshall of Olds, A. McLean of Lethbridge and Dr. Warnock. No announcement is expected however before Monday.

In the District Court of the District of Calgary

Between D. A. MacCrimmon of Crossfield, Alberta, Plaintiff, and Harvey Sower, of Crossfield, Alberta, Defendant.

To Harvey Sower the above named Defendant.

You are notified that the above named plaintiff has entered an action against you in the above named Court for the recovery of the claim, a statement of which is filed in Court whereby the plaintiff claims $305.78 and costs.

And you are notified that if you dispute the said claim, either in whole or in part you do on or before the 19th day of June A. D. 1910, cause to be entered for you in the office of the clerk of this Court an appearance, and within six days thereafter file with the said Clerk a statement of the ground on which such dispute is based.

And take notice that in default of your doing so the plaintiff may proceed in his said action, and judgment may be given in your absence, and without further notice to you.

This notice is given pursuant to Order of His Honor Judge Mitchell, dated the 17th day of May A. D. 1910.
